People count in life, school

In the autumn, like oceans of falling leaves, students fill the school halls, greeting old friends and meeting new ones and finally settling into the school routine. To help with the process are ball games, clubs, new classes and assignments, and of course other students.

The people, though, are the most important part of school; it is other people you must learn to work with, to understand. At WCHS, the students are able to really know the people around them, not just students, but teachers well. Involvement in school activities comes easy when you know those people around you. Cooperation stems from the involvement; friendships grow and so do people as they become more aware of their surroundings, more a part of the world in which they live.

Enthusiasm's not just for sports

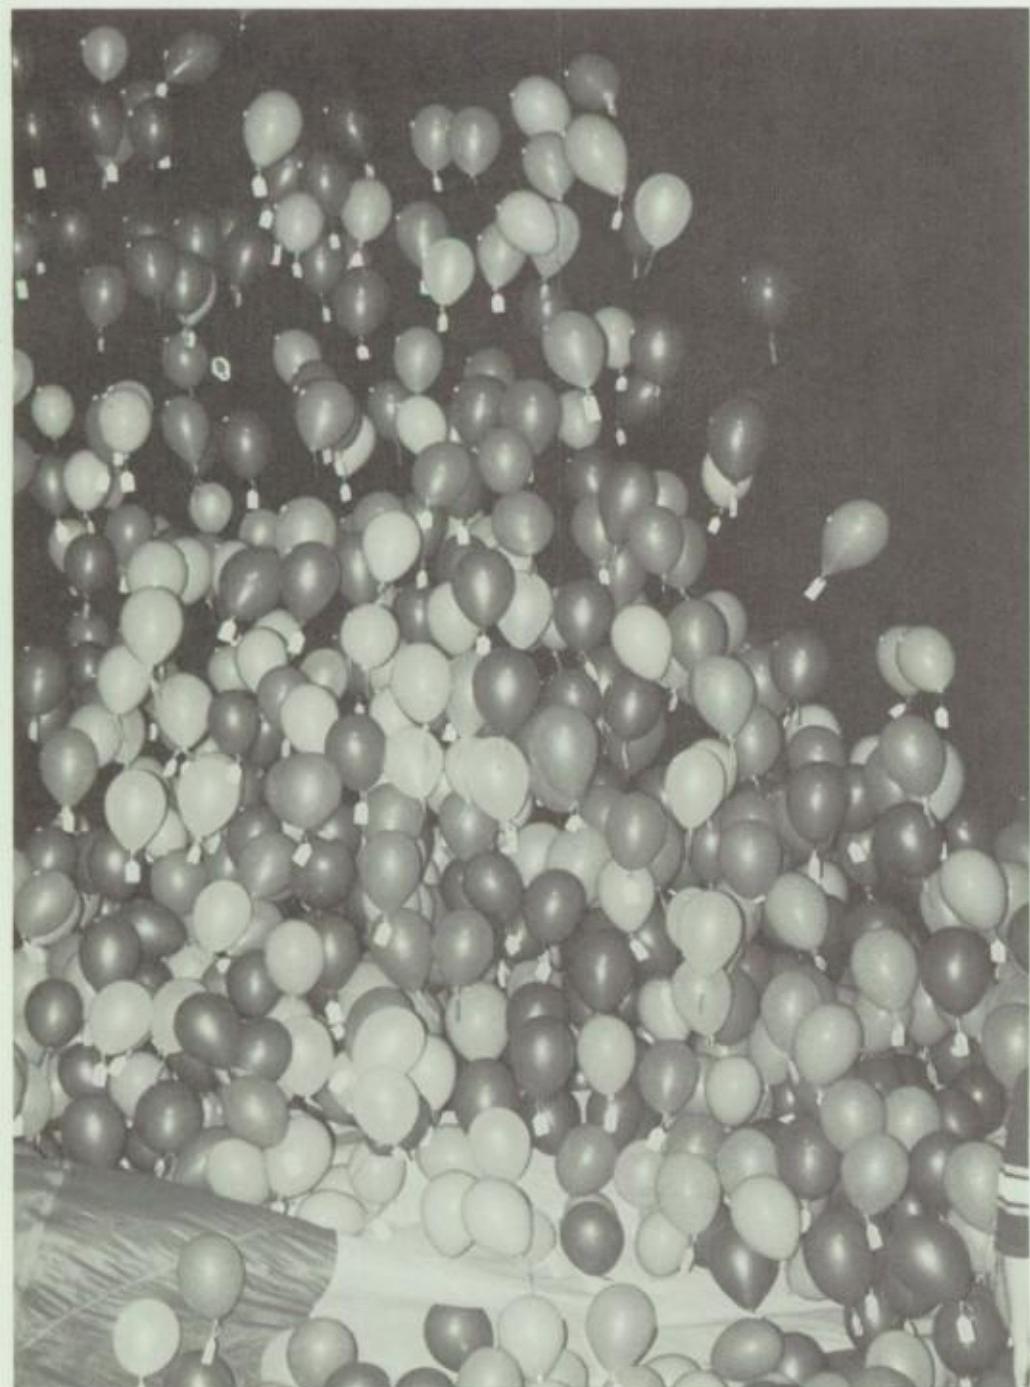

Often enthusiasm and school spirit are defined as being equals and thought of as being snappy pep sessions, gaily decorated halls, and winning teams. That definition doesn't go far enough. Enthusiasm is also the hard work spent in classes or outside of school for things like newspaper and band or the long hours put in by the athletes and music groups. Enthusiasm includes the feeling for the whole of student life—classes, clubs, sports, plays, and people alike.

Not as many students were found at football or basketball games as in years past, but the students were involved elsewhere. Enthusiasm spilled over at WCHS for a performance of "Camelot", and through friendly class competition at the Powder Puff football game.

Still more students were involved in clubs and classes. All showed enthusiasm for being a part of WCHS.

Students join with faculty to be individuals

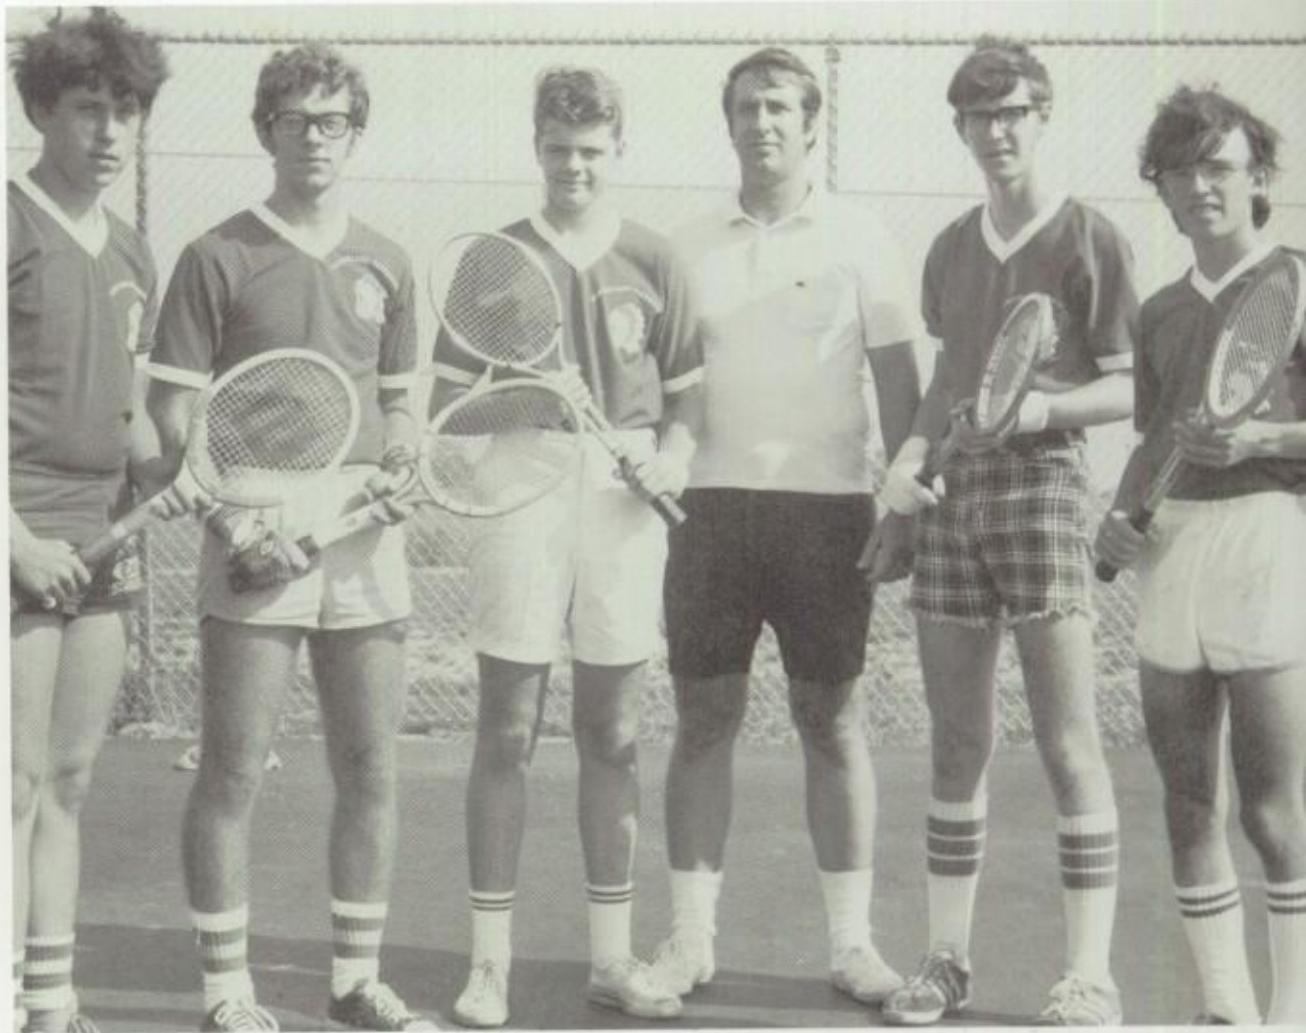

People at WCHS are divided into various groups, each group serving to classify people as to their function, their age, their likes and dislikes. Teachers and other faculty members are set apart; they are the authority. Students are classified according to class, academic status and athletic ability. Clubs appeal to various interests and divide the student and faculty into still smaller groups.

Sometimes people are confined to their "pigeon hole;" except where groups overlap, they may not come in contact with different types of people. Somehow, though in the overlapping, we tend to forget what group we belong to, or even that we belong to any one group and we see each other as people.

Goals help to mold people

One of the main purposes of any learning institution is to provide the students with a background which will enable them to set and achieve goals. These goals may be long-range ones concerning a career or they may be more immediate goals such as winning a ball game. Each type of goal is important because of what a student learns in reaching toward that goal. By trying, by putting forth that extra effort to win a game or get a scholarship, you've grown some! The effort molds you little by little. As any athlete knows, running a little further each day may make muscles ache, but they grow stronger and it no longer hurts to run. The desire is still there, and new goals are set to achieve.

School growth helps business

Area business provides a good means of growth and expansion for a community. They also provide us with recreational areas in which to spend our leisure time. Whether it's a new bowling alley, a larger hardware store or more parking spaces at the supermarket they are always growing and expanding to meet community demands. The more our community continues to grow the harder the merchant has to work to meet the always increasing demands. With each new year comes more facilities to provide efficient service for the growing community. It is through this growth and expansion that we will become a prosperous and thriving community always growing to meet future needs.

A. Patty McAndrews, Patsy Sleighter, and Debbie Coffman always find reliable service at Reliable Drugs.

Student Life

Varied classes allow students more freedom

From a variety of subjects offered, each student tries to choose the ones which he thinks will prepare him for life after graduation, or at least let him graduate. Several subjects, though, are inescapable such as English, government, and sociology, gym class and health class. Other standards are set: two major areas of study must be decided on, each requiring six credits, plus two minors, four credits each; these to provide a solid background in several areas.

Most of the departments are expanding to allow for greater freedom of class choice. Several departments include college prep classes for those college bound students, while courses in home economics, agriculture, shop, and journalism help prepare students for other careers.

Classes help to prepare for life now, later

Education trends are learning toward more and more vocational training, allowing students to prepare for jobs immediately after high school. Skills learned in home ec classes, agriculture classes, and shop classes can be applied in every day situations. Students at WCHS are now able to attend classes at Central 9 Vocational School where they carry the idea one step further to actually learn on the job skills.

Preparation for a technological society begins in such future-oriented classes as physics, chemistry, and math. There the basis for careers in science are learned.

F
D. Keith Burgett and Mr. Culver make some adjustments on a John Deer tractor.

E. Ken Shanafelt proudly puts the finishing touches on the chess table he made in Woods class.

F. Miss Barringer explains a proof to Cathy Janeway in geometry class.

Creativeness of students is expressed

A wide variety of classes from English to home ec. allows students some form of creative expression. This year more classes of this nature were available because of the new phase-elective English program. Next year the history department will be expanding its classes providing students with a wider variety from which to choose.

Vocational students can now expand their outlooks in their field of interest with the addition of Central 9.

Music theory and advanced music are being made available next year to students interested in music.

Such a variety of classes allows for more ways of creative expression.

G. Students in Art II explored a variety of media and methods to complete projects.

Preparing for tomorrow's achievements

Much preparation is jumbled into four high school years. Students are constantly preparing themselves for classes which in turn prepare them for those long-awaited days after graduation.

At WCHS students who don't wish to further their education are provided a wide variety of classes such as wood shop, auto mechanic, or agriculture so that they can prepare themselves in their vocation.

Many choices of classes are available for college-bound students to prepare them for future studies in their field of interest.

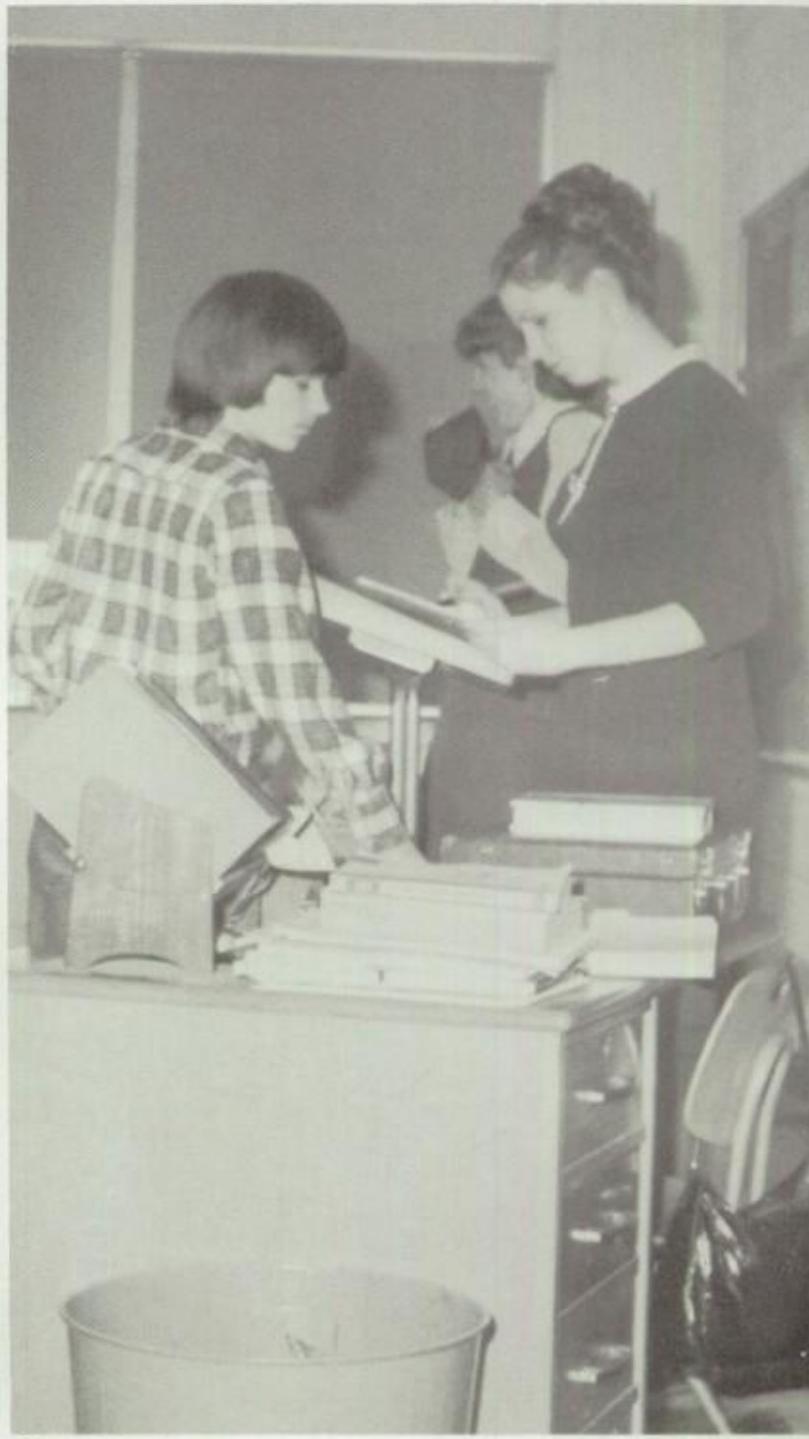

Each year new and different classes are added to the curriculum for the student's choice. With more classes students will be better prepared to meet their future goals.

Classes teach students of the world outside

Relevancy is such an important word today; classes must not only be interesting, they must pertain to what is really happening in the world. Perhaps that is the reason special interest is taken in government, the sciences, business classes, and home ec. Each explores a fundamental part of the world surrounding us, from the basic structure of our government to the simple business of running a home.

The understanding gained, the ideas presented and questioned, and the new questions posed give students a look at life.

Tradition—the Warrior goal

Tradition, that's what marks the goal of all Whiteland football teams, and this year's team was no different. After losing a lot of experience from the previous year, the Warriors were almost totally untried. A young offensive line containing only one letterman started out to make a name for themselves, and a back field with a few position changes set out to show they were as good as the back fields of years past.

The defensive unit had some fine returning lettermen, but there were still some vital positions left unfilled.

Together they made a young and inexperienced team with one common goal in mind—to uphold the tradition of Whiteland Warrior football.

Seniors end great years

The end of the 1973-74 basketball season has special significance. It marks the end of a high school career for a senior class which has known nothing but success. For the last five years John Coy and Randy Wood have lead Whiteland teams as they played on to five winning seasons. With the graduation of these two seniors Tyler Lawrence, Doug Poe, Tony Massinon, and Sam Greer—WCHS marks the end of the most successful basketball class in warrior history.

In 1973-74 this success was aided by Juniors Jim Means and Doug Gerdт, Whitelands hope for next year.

Wrestling is not individual

Wrestling is not a sport where individual discipline and excellence is required, buy one where team effort and support plus leadership is a must. Whiteland grapplers really learned this in the 73-74 season. Under a new head coach, Rodney Merrell, the wrestlers learned to pull together and fill in gaps at various weight classes. Strong leadership from seniors rounded out the efforts of underclassmen for a winning season.

Taking a third in the Sectional and County tourneys doesn't make too exciting a record, but the Warriors displayed a lot of excitement and determination as two of the wrestlers journeyed to the state contest and one, junior Mark Egbert, made WCHS history by capturing the state championship crown.

It was the second year Mark qualified and a year's experience surely aided him as he grabbed the title at 105 lbs. Javier Mendoza, also a junior at 112 lbs., made a great showing in the state and no doubt will return.

Girls look to next season

The girls' track team did pretty well for the second season. Many girls on the team have a great deal of potential and next year we should see a stronger team.

Two girls qualified for the sectionals this year: Monica Morris in the shot put and Cheryl Arvidson in the hurdles. Coach Amerpohl is looking forward to next season when she will lead the Warriorettes to more victories.

Baseball team ups average

This year the baseball team had a hard time against their highly-rated opponents. The team as a whole worked hard.

Even though the team did not win very many games during the season, their combined batting average for the year is now 0.253.

The team will be losing six seniors next year, but these places will be filled by experienced underclassmen.

Activities provide growth

WCHS is an alive institution. Activities, projects, programs, and assignments fill the days of Whiteland's students and teachers. There is a chance for everyone to discover what interests him and an opportunity to develop skills in that area. Different activities cultivate and increase the varied talents of members of the WCHS student body and faculty. Working on things that are enjoyable brings about a better understanding of the world around you.

Beyond the classroom is a world of ideas

A student's life centers around more than just the classes he attends. Also important to his growing is the participation in activities which let him explore his own creativity.

Band, choir groups and the journalism department aren't considered as academics but each involves dedication, imagination, and hours of hard work. Language clubs give a special dimension to my foreign culture and organizations such as Health Careers and Student Action for Education give insight into careers.

Whatever the choices and tastes of the individual, clubs take students one step beyond the classroom to a world of participation.

Band provides WCHS Spirit

Among the many honors bestowed on the Whiteland Community High School Marching Band was a first place rating in the Southport Marching Band Contest. Many band members also received first place rating at the District State Solo and Ensemble contest.

The band not only provided half-time entertainment for all the home football games but also, they helped boost the spirit of Whiteland fans at home basketball games through the Pep Band.

Feature twirler Debbie Golden and Drum Major Randy Clark led the Marching Warriors at all marching contests. Debbie Golden entertained at all home basketball games to the music of the Pep Band.

Choir gives WCHS new promotion in singing talent

The four branches of choir—Swing Choir, Entrees, All-Girls Choir, and Mixed Choir—had a very busy year under the direction of Mrs. Jane Brewer. Among the performances were the Spring Show, Christmas Show, singing at the Circle, graduation, and school convocations.

Belonging to choir isn't just a matter of singing, it requires talent, time, and patience.

This year was Whiteland's turn to host the Johnson County Choral Festival in the Glenn Ray Gymnasium.

Choirs sing for enjoyment of everyone

The Entrees won a very impressive first place in first division at the State Solo and Ensemble contest. The other choirs won no other awards as a whole although WCHS was well represented as far as individuals go.

The spring choir show, which was a group choir effort, had a very wide variety of songs such as, "Chicago Medley," Andrews sisters and Jim Stafford's songs.

Health Careers, FHA, FBLA aid students

FHA sponsored by Miss Hon, brought health related careers closer to members. The annual scholarship and dinner were held.

Tina Moore and Susie Lutes served as state officers of FBLA. To encourage members to become our future business leaders and to demonstrate ways of doing this was accomplished by FBLA.

FHA is one of the more practical clubs which actually prepares more citizens for the world. This is achieved by speakers, demonstrations, state conventions, projects or just plain serving. Four officers went to the Hilton where the State convention was held to enable their chapter to improve.

Chess Club Drama Club aid students

To be a member of Dramatics club is an honor because to be a member takes a lot of time, hard work, dedication and talent. Not only must there be actors but there must also be good crews; lights, costume, make-up and backstage.

Dramatics club sponsored the all-school drama, "Camelot." With the help of many band and choral members, the play was able to become a success.

Dramatics club also sponsored the all-school play, "Here Comes the Brides," that was one of the best comedies ever performed in the F.E. Barnes Auditorium.

Foreign Clubs teach customs

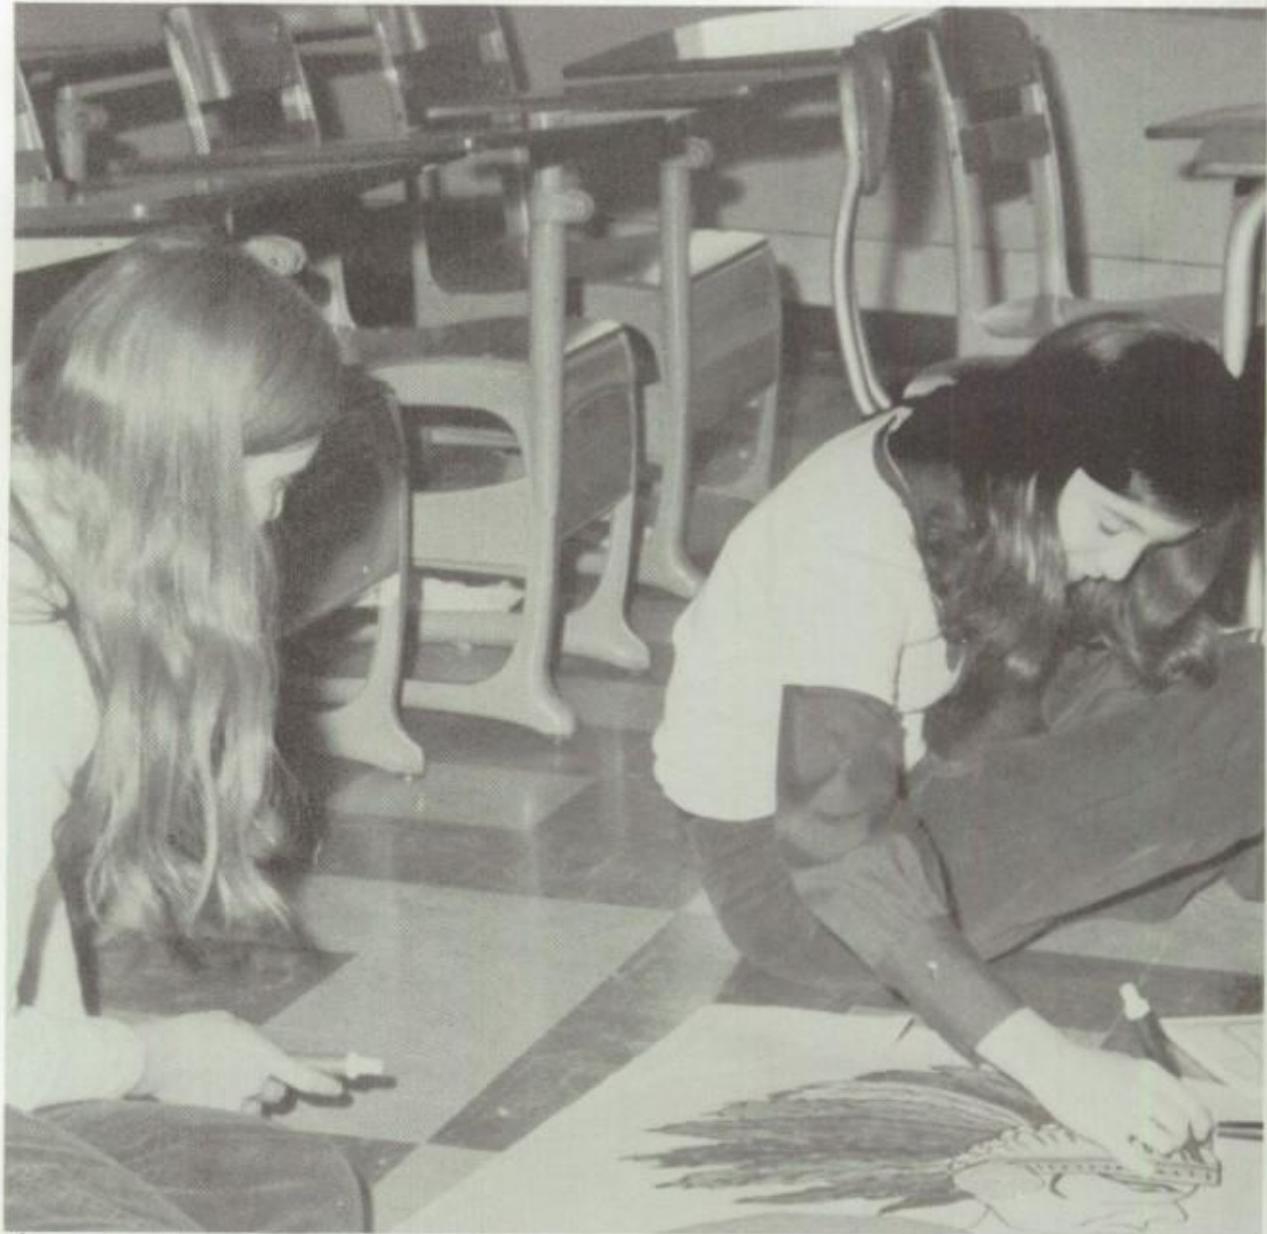

Finding out the many interests and cultural backgrounds of foreign countries is the main goal that French, Spanish, and Latin clubs go for. This goal was achieved through various activities such as initiations, conventions, club meetings, projects and speakers.

Latin club had a state president, Kevin Andrews, of all the Latin Clubs in the state. The annual Roman Banquet was also held where all new members are auctioned off to old members.

Spanish clubs went to the Taco House and had various speakers to help bring a little bit of Mexico into W.C.H.S.

French Club went to the famous La Tours which is located on top of the Indiana National Bank in Indianapolis.

To see a language club initiated propose to the sponsor, chase a peanut across a room, have a ketchup fight was not an uncommon occurrence during an initiation.

People

Administrators are vital

The administration and faculty have done an exceptional job in keeping our school running smoothly. Each member is a vital part of the operation.

Superintendent of Schools James Hannah, and his assistant Kenneth Chesser face quite a task as they attempt to keep over eight hundred high school students happy as well as keeping the people of the community satisfied.

English Dept. gets new look

The English department attracted much attention this year because of the many changes which were made. Juniors and seniors were allowed for the first time to choose four nine-week mini-courses from a field of 21. Students were required to take one course from the following areas: Composition, Literature, Oral Communication, and Language. Underclassmen also had new courses but were not allowed to choose. Freshmen were required to take American Literature, reading, and grammar. Sophomores took World Literature, speech, and composition.

Students and teachers alike agree that the new language arts program helps to keep the students interested because of the nature of the courses and also because of the fact that there is a new teacher and class each nine weeks.

Teachers guide students

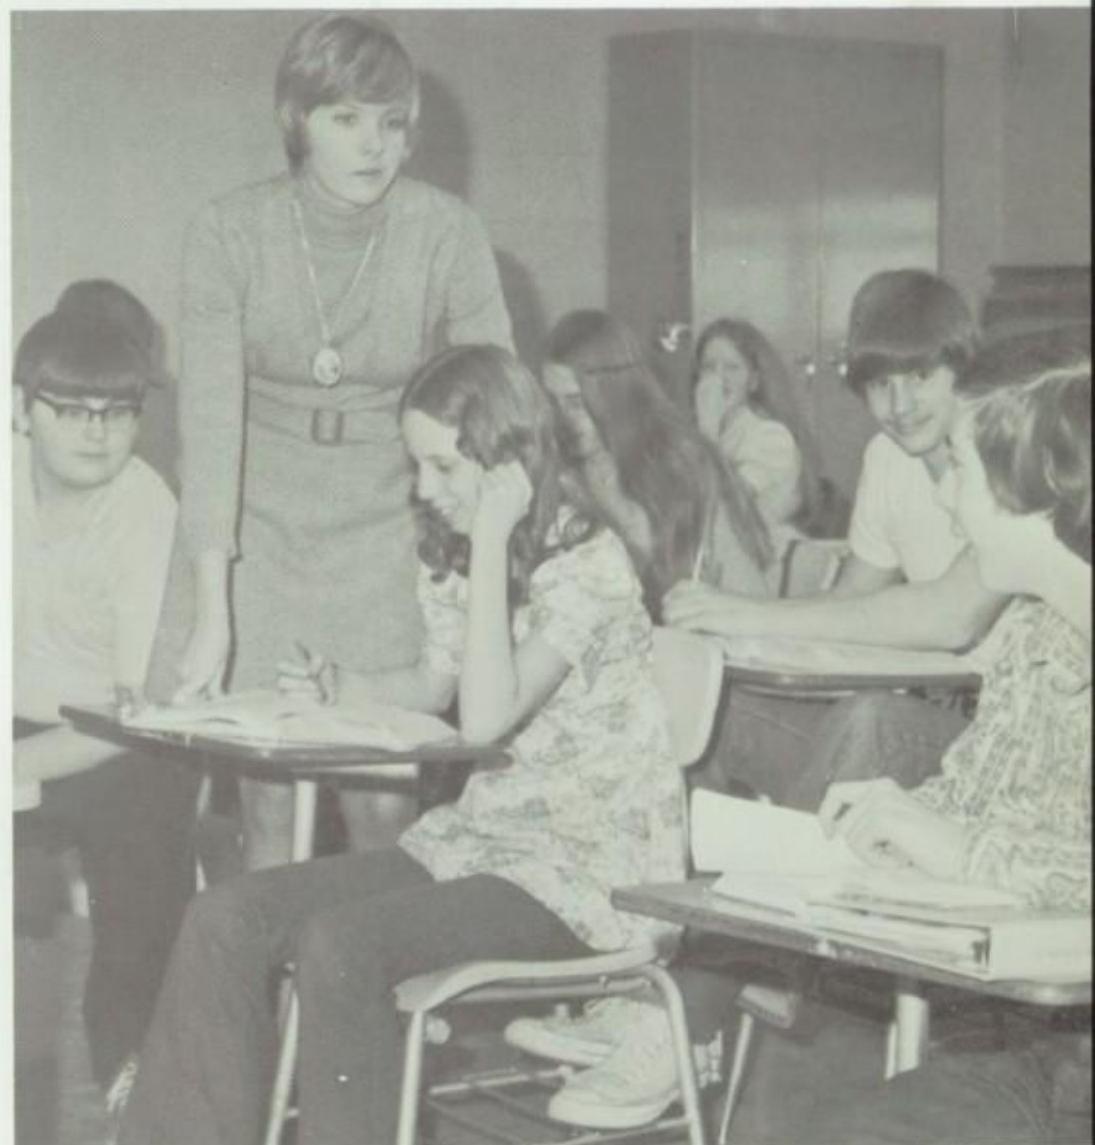

The Math, History, and Science teachers, and the Guidance Counselors all helped to better prepare the students of Whiteland Community High School for college or some other form of higher education. These teachers tried to instill a desire within the students to become better educated and more informed individuals.

All WCHS instructors put forth much time and effort in helping to guide the students in many different ways. Many of the school activities which students enjoy would not exist if it weren't for the involvement of teachers.

Students learn new vocations

The Business, Fine Arts, and vocational departments of our school are doing much work to make sure that the graduates of Whiteland Community High School are fully prepared to handle the job of their choice. These departments are doing well in keeping up to date in their methods of teaching. There have been changes in courses that are offered and new machines have been added to many of the departments.

These teachers deal mostly in the aspect of trying to teach students a vocation which will stay with them and help them for the rest of their lives.

Seniors share mixed feelings

Being a senior is different from being a member of any other class. High spirits, a pride in the accomplishments of your class, and a feeling of unity that comes after four years of shared struggles and fun are a big part of the final step in high school—being a senior. As the realization that this is your last year together sinks in, activities and excitement reach a high pitch in an attempt to enjoy while it lasts. Anticipation is mingled with a slight dread of graduation and what it will bring.

Rules play an important part

Restrictions, restrictions, and more restrictions are an important part in the growth and development of any person. High School is one of the outlets in which you will be restricted and yet find the happiness in which you will glow on for the rest of your life. As much as students put school down as a "bummer", they all miss it when they are out on their own. You have to see through the dress codes, gum chewing rules, and attendance restrictions to realize that high school is only trying to prepare you for your future. Every restriction in high school is necessary for your own good and for the good of the outside world of which someday you will be an important part.

As spring rolls around, many students are faced with boredom and a fever to be anywhere else but school and doing anything other than work. Senior Randy Clark exhibits his creative ability by constructing a house out of index cards while "studying" in the library.

Seniors of '74 brave various undertakings

Being a senior brings with it a special kind of unity that spreads through the entire class. However, there are many different ways this oneness is shared. Activities for the twelfth graders range from the serious to the competitive to just plain fun. But you can be sure that whatever a senior does, it becomes a part of the lasting memories of his senior year.

The Class of '74 participated in and created a great diversity of activities. The Powder Puff Football Game, the Junior Miss Pageant, making signs, decorating lockers, and eating at senior tables are all examples of seniors working and playing together. Even if the event calls for a lot of work, seniors always seem to be enjoying themselves.

Books and studies are another facet of senior life. Going through classes and exams together, sitting on government court case juries, deciphering shorthand assignments, and trying to figure out where you went wrong in the physics experiment also have a way of joining seniors together. Seeing classmates through the disasters of high school, such as flunking tests or having a friend grow away from you, seems to bind you closely to these companions. The good times, which include giving class pictures and seeing your name in the school paper, seem better when you have a classmate who cares.

Seniors involved in WCHS

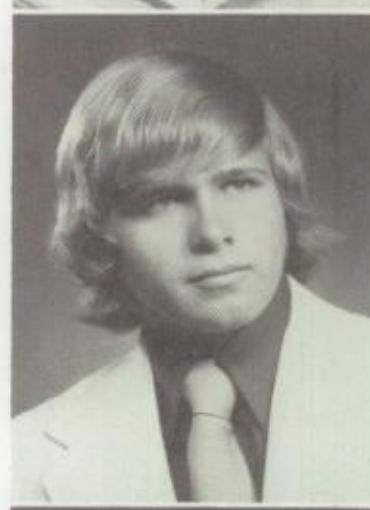

Involvement is a word that expresses what being a senior is all about. It's caring not only about yourself, but others, too, and wanting to do something for them, even if it means work. You are ready to help and guide others by using the knowledge and experience your years of school have made available.

Getting involved means you are willing to work at something until it's done. It's participation in whatever you are interested in, or working hard for whatever needs to be done.

Seniors may not benefit directly from any changes they may bring about at WCHS, but they realize that every improvement they leave behind is a credit to the memory of the class of 1974.

Seniors made most of year's experiences

WCHS is a place to determine who you are by reacting to the environment around you. Seniors are always finding out more things about themselves. As they go through different experiences, they discover their feelings about various kinds of situations.

Senior events are special for more than one reason. Not only do occasions play a large part in their personal development, but it is also the last time the seniors as a class will experience these adventures and incidents. Whether participating in a basketball sectionals skit, receiving their senior keys, or going through their final semester exams, seniors are sure to make the most of their last moments together.

Unity comes from projects

Projects have held classes together through the years, and this is especially true for the class of '74.

The Freshman project was getting through the first official year of high school. They endured initiation and learning seniors were "boss."

Sophomores sold soap and ordered class rings. During the basketball season, juniors sold concessions to earn enough money for the prom. The various committees for the prom kept juniors busy from April until prom time in May.

When, at last, the senior year arrives, it's a time to sit back and enjoy previous achievements. The final project of the class of '74 will be completed when the seniors walk down the aisle and receive their diplomas.

Debbie Martin, Randy Money, Kevin Parham, Tony Massinon, Donna Poynter, Sharon Nachand, and

Seniors find traditions are enjoyable

Tradition is an important thing to seniors. Practices begun years ago by earlier WCHS graduating classes are still carried on. The senior tables in the cafeteria, Hobo Day, and Senior Days—a day for each senior to visit colleges and hunt for jobs—are considered precious rights earned after twelve years of school. These customs provide many happy memories for seniors to look back on.

Seniors finish year's projects

Although they long await it, seniors always finish with some feelings of reluctance. The year's activities often keep their minds from focusing on such thoughts as they wander from homecoming to homecoming and to the prom. It is at graduation that the realization finally touches their minds. As they prepare for graduation they also prepare themselves for the moment when they'll step into an unsuspecting world.

Juniors work toward goals

The junior year is one of anticipation and preparation. Participation in many different activities and events helps develop and ready juniors for their future lives.

Juniors are only a year away from being upperclassmen. The eleventh grade is a time for learning more responsibility and realizing that you have to work to achieve your goals. Many juniors prepared for their future by taking the PSAT and SAT tests.

The main task for the class of '75 was the prom. Juniors labored all year to make the prom a success. Selling concessions at basketball games and working on prom details and decorations helped keep the juniors busy.

Juniors near journey's end

Juniors are on the last stretch of the path to being seniors. The journey was begun when they stepped into WCHS as freshmen, and will end when they graduate next year. As juniors, the class of '75 has been through many things together—from initiations to class projects to decorating committees. These experiences have helped prepare them for the responsibilities they will have to carry next year as seniors.

Sophomores work together

By their sophomore year, tenth graders have realized more of what WCHS is all about. After surviving their initiation into high school, the sophomores are ready to enjoy themselves and really become an active part of WCHS.

Projects are a big part of the class of '76. Ordering class rings and selling stationery to start their prom fund were important happenings for the sophomores. Working with one another on these ventures gave the class of '76 a chance to grow closer and become more unified. They are left with the challenge of facing their remaining high school years together.

Freshmen find changes

The main objective of the freshman class is survival. Changes, new experiences, and getting accustomed to traditions fill the freshmen's first year at WCHS. Ninth graders learn about the spirit, cooperation, and responsibilities that are needed for a successful and enjoyable high school career.

The class of '77 participated in many events. Providing refreshments at the Homecoming Dance and having entries in the tricycle race head the list. Through their experiences, the freshmen are getting ready for their future duties as upperclassmen.

Frosh share new problems

The first year of high school is the worst, or so it has been said. This year's freshmen have had the average amount of problems, but their problems seem less than the classes before.

Scheduling is becoming more difficult with the addition of classes and bomb threats more frequent, but the class of '77 is making it as freshmen, and they are sure to be able to solve the school's problems in the future.

People make WCHS happen

WCHS is made up of many different types of people. From Freshmen to seniors, every person plays his own part in shaping WCHS into something special.

Whatever Whiteland students are doing, you can be sure they are trying their hardest to both enjoy themselves and help other. Whether working on assignments, putting on a music program, or taking part in club activities, WCHS students are making it happen!

Spirit Shown by concern

In many ways it seemed as though student apathy had never been greater in 1973-74. Absences and a decline in the support of athletics seemed to say, "Who cares". Students did care, though and in other ways achieved greater success than ever before. In the spring there was a new awareness and for the first time the Smoke Signals received letters to the editor. Ideas poured into the suggestion box. Perhaps this is a rebirth of school spirit at WCHS.

Dear Maria,
Hi! I just read
yours to me. I don't know what to say but I'll say something. You've always remembered
go into the Waffle guys because you were carried all the time
remember all the time we wait till tomorrow we can't wait till you pigs see the boat back in. See all the ones we will have seen late to do our well boat back in. See all the time we were here believe live now we papers had we wanted you all the way you will want them I think I take care always but I can also be good. By you always for too. Yours for you'll be to all the as far as the with you,

will of you,
